the conventional method of using this herb for treating earaches involves preparing a poultice by crushing the leaves to discharge their components the conflict of interest between large producing firms and smaller producers in terms of what each can gain from the cartel prevented a continuation of the collusive arrangement